

You need to already have access to a wiki.

If you click the pages button you can see a menu of all of the pages within your wiki, if you do not have any pages within your wiki you will have to create them.

To create new pages click this button here.

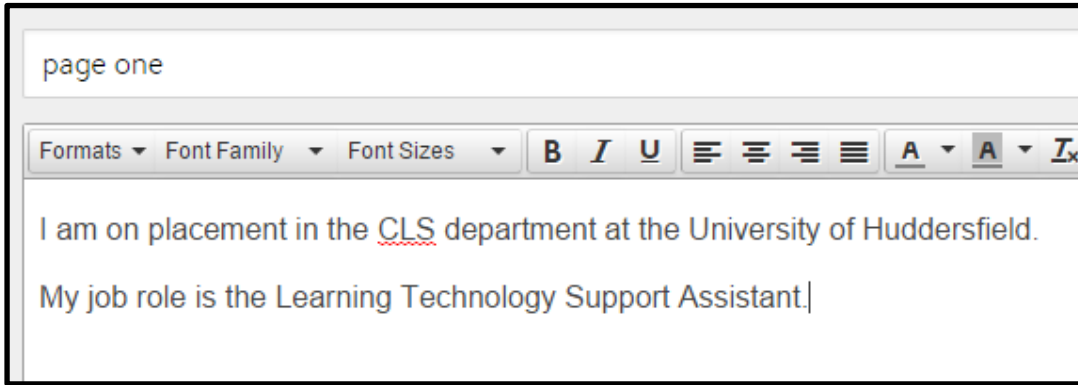

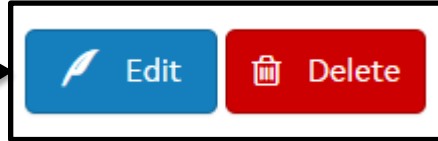

The main body of the screen is shown here, it contains the content of the wiki page.

When you select the new page button this is the screen you will see, you can add your page title and then type in the content.

If you decide to edit your content after you created it, simply select edit.

This will then open up an editable version of the page, you can add more information or edit the text that is already there.

You can select predefined formats, fonts and size from the drop down boxes here.

You can add basic formatting styles such as Bold and alignment using these options here.

Again you have some basic formatting, you can copy, paste and bullet point your text.

Here you can change the text colour, background colour, clear all formatting or undo the last thing you did.

Here you can indent, add links and other media or insert a table.

This buttons allows you to view the html code.
